THE DRAMA-MUSIC.

MRS, FAIRFAX'S ENTERTAINMENT. Mrs. Fairfax (Evans Bell) appeared last night in Steinway Hail, and gave a lecture and a reading. Her sudience was numerous—the hall being two-thirds filledand it was largely composed of persons representative of the taste, intellect and fashion of this community. Mrs. Fairfax, in the course of her introductory remarks, spoke of the essential importance of nature in dramatic art, and paid a tribute to the memory of Charlotte Cushman. Also she spoke very kindly of Miss Mary Anderson, and stated that the voices of Miss Cushman and Miss Anderson had impressed her as kindred, in some of their She then dwelt with discreet emphasis upon the difference existing between action and elocution, urged the propriety of each artist's maintenance of an individual style, and reminded her bearers that it is quite possible for a person who is a good actor to be, nevertheless, a bad elecutionist. Many persons, she said, may imitate Mr. Irving's peculiarities of speech and manner, but what might be "monstrosities" of style in others would yet remain merits in him, and aids to the effects he labors to produce. Remarks upon the peculiarities of English speech, as heard in English society then followed, and Mrs. Fairfax gave an apt and droll imitation of a supposed colloquy between an English "swell" and a fine lady of fashion. "I am told by my friends," she then added. "that Anglo-phobia is hovering in the air. I hope that you in America will never adopt either the speech or the manners of what is called good society in Eng-or the manners of what is called and frequently ap-land." Mrs. Fairfax was loudly and frequently ap-plauded, in the course of these observations. In the recitations which followed this address Mrs. Fairfax afforded a practical illustration of her precept n favor of simplicity. The lady has a smooth, flexible, and carrying" voice, in its low tones melodious, and in its occasional deep tones indicative of powerful feeling. Her figure is large and fine and she has dark eyes, dark hair, and a frank and kind face. She was simply dressed, in white, and wore a few flowers. With reference to the extent and nature of her abilities in dramatic art it was impossible to form a satisfactory judgment from the rendering of the programme arranged for this occasion.

Most of the pieces chosen are unsuitable for a public reading. Matthew Arnold's verses called "The Last Word," for example, is not a a public reading. Matthew Arnold's verses called "The Last Word," for example, is not a poem at all, nor a representative dramatic piece, but only the versified expression of a philosopher's sense of having been rejected by the medicerity of the passing age. Several other pieces, quite as duil and colorless for this purpose, were repeated, in a level and commonplace manner. In "The Spanish Mother," and in "Scenes from the School for Seandal," however, Mrs. Fairfax evinced the faculty of discrimination as to character, a variable, sympathetic temperament, sensitive to herode and tender emotions, and the capacity of railbery, equivoke, and satire. She is, we should imagine, more able in mind than in the mastery of any form of expression—and therefore a sensitive and useful teacher, rather than an actress. The recitations of her pupil "Tina," were artificial and tedious, and such as should be mereifully restricted to the nursery. To expect a child to understand, or even faintly indicate, what is wrapped up in the speech of Jacques on burnan life is folly—and all prattling of Shakespeare is out of place in public. Miss Mand Morgan enlivened the occasion by a touching performance upon the harp. Should Mrs. Fairfax appear again, it would, we think, be wise for her to select a good dramatic programme, dispensing with auxiliaries, and likewise omitting both needless compliments to America (which is not a Paradise either of sense or artistic calitivation) and satirical reference to the society of her own land. "The play's the thing," and the artist is better shown in works than in opinions and theories. Mrs. Fairfax, however, it should be added, commended herself to the kindly liking of her audience by her own engasting personal qualities, her enthusiasm, her sincerity, and her ouvious knowledge of her audience by her own engaging personal qualities, her epihususin, her sincerity, and her obvious knowledge

MME. GERSTER AND MR. MAPLESON.

The non-appearance of Mme. Gerster at Mr. Mapleson's Sunday concert, and her reported defection from the Academy of Music forces, were fruitful themes for discussion on Monday in musical circles. Mme. Gerster and her husband, Dr. Gardini, were frequently sought at the Everett House by carlons friends, but without success. They were met by Mmc. Gerster's companion, a dark-eyed Italian maiden, who spoke Eng-lish with a pretty accent and great fluency, but was un-part to play in politics, and I should be distressed to see lish with a pretty accent and great fluency, but was un-able to understand the simplest questions framed in that language which bore on the subject of her mistress.

Mr. Mapleson was at the Academy of Music all day, and when he was asked about the startling reports that had been printed he said: " A tissue of lies, my boy, from beginning to end. The story about my whirling about in a cab and importuning Mme. Gerster to sing is pure a cab and importuning Mme. Gerster to sing is pure fiction, I assure you. And so is the statement about our financial arrangements. Mme. Gerster is not the woman to sing for $700 a week and give credit for the remaining thousands. The World story especially is a catalogue of thes. I have written the Editor of that sheet a noie demanding that he make retraction before 2 o'clock tomorrow, or I shall begin a suit for criminal libel.

"Mme. Gerster was fill, there is no doubt about that. She could scarcely get through her part on Saturday. But her husband said on Saturday evening that she would appear at the concert on Sunday. If she had not done so and given me proper notice, I should not have complained. But I did not like the way in which she did the thing."

IN TONQUIN. Paris, Nov. 27 .- A rumor was current this afternoon in the lobbies of the Chamber of Deputies that Admiral Courbet, with his forces, had been defeated in Tonquin by the Black Flags, and his communications cut off. There is considerable uneasiness felt at the absence of news from Admiral Courbet's expedition. Excited crowds thronged the boulevards until a late hour eagerly discussing the rumor. The reticence of the Government was much commented upon. Several members of the Committee on Tonquin Credits urged Prime Minister Ferry to abandon his reserve and inform the Chamber of the position of affairs. In view of this state of things the following semiofficial communiqué was sent to the papers: We are authorized to declare that up to the moment of going to press the Government has received no dispatch from Tonquin unfavorable to the French. THE MYSTERY AT ORANGE.

PROVES AN ALIBI. There have been some developments in the Phæbe Paulitn murder case. Two shirts, stained with blood, were found on Monday night by some boys in a patch of wild unenclosed ground at the extreme end of North Park-st., where it joins the Bloomfield Road and the old road to Montelair. The patch is part of the property of Catherine Stuckey, now living in Newark, formerly lived in an old cottage at the corner of the Mont-clair road. There are blackberry vines growing wild in every direction, and some few chestnut and oak trees. When the boys discovered the shirts they informed a police officer of Orange, who lives in the neighborhood in German-st. He fetched them in and handed them over to the Chief of Police, Marshal McChesney, and by his order they were sent to Dr. J. W. Stickler, of Orange, who has gained some fame for his microscopic tests.

THE TRIBUNE reporter called upon him, and he said that he had cut from the upper flap of one of the shirts a white cotton one, a circular piece about an inch and a half in diameter. He had soaked this in water, and from the watery solution obtained white and red globules of the solid constituents of blood, some large, flat epithelial scales, and some small, flat, nucleated cells. The stains were such as would be made under such circumstances as attended the murder of Phoebe Paullin. The doctor showed the shirts. One of them was a cheap white cotton shirt, fastening at the back, with three stud-holes in front which were used. It had been torn at the shoulder and had been sewed together by a man with large coarse stitches. There were ominous stains upon the flap, which the doc tor said were in all probability blood. An attempt had been made to wash it in muddy water. The other was a rough overshirt of cotton of a checked pattern much used by laboring men, who call them "hickories." Mr. Goldstein, a dry-goods merchant of Orange, subsequently informed the reporter that they were known to the trade as "cheviots." This shirt had been mended at the back with a piece of a woman's printed calleo dress, white and blue flowers on a chocolate ground. The sleeves had been deeply stained with blood. At the police station in Orange the reporter saw Marshal McCheeney, who told him that a man had been ar-rested by the police officer who had brought in the shirts. His name was Chester Williams or erally called him "Butcher" or "Butch" Williams. because he was a professional butcher and had worked in his father's slaughter-house up on North Park-st., which is within sixty yards of the place where the shirts were found. He was also a hatter, and worked as a laborer, being drunken and shiftless so that he stuck to was permitted to enter and speak to him. So strong was the light that it was reflected by the water for miles, the color in the direct line where the sun had disappeared being of the deepest tint, and that on either side vanishing in the darkness. A few thin clouds appeared against background of red. When set they were not included in the glow, which extended only a few degrees above the horizon. But as the sun sank the semi-circle of light grow bigger, until the splendor of the scene was beyond description. recopie in the street were sure that a big fire was raging—the light was not that of a sunset; and it was currently reported that dispatches were sent to Staten Island and to Bayonne asking where the fire was. People stood in the streets and gazed at the novel sight and crowds were in the parks where a better view could be obtained. Those on the Bridge had a fine view of the spectacle, the lights along the shore of the river and bay and on the boats heightening the pieturesque effect of the scene. The length of fine during which the phenomenon was visible was a common subject of remark. Soon after 6 o'clock, however, the heavens showed only the gilmmering of the stars, whose modest beauty had been quenched

While the display lasted the city wires of the Western Union Telegraph Company were burdened with inquiries from uptown offices as to the locality undertes from uplown offices as to the locality and extent of the fire. Persons dropped into these offices and by their questions aroused the curiosity of the operators safficiently to induce them to apply for information to the main office. The sending of the reply "Bunset" "stress monotonous to the cirks in the bey-sit, building, but it had to be keps up until after 6 o'clock. No electrical disturbances were noted and at the Signal service Office at the top of the Equitable Banding nothing unusual was apparent in the condition of the atmosphere. The luminity of the atmosphere was not great; in fact, as one of the officers remarked, the weather had been particularly dry. When the 3 p. in, observation was taken the record showed a hundrity of 30 p per cent, but by 7 o'clock it had dincreased to 4s per cent. The halter figure, however, showed no musus al amount of moisture in the sir. The temperature was 40 to 3 may a decline not unusual

AN ALARM OF FIRE AT POUGHKEEPSIE. Poughkeepsie, Nov. 27 .- The Fire Department was called out at half-past 5 o'clock this evening and the fire bells were rung because of an extensive illumination in the southwestern part of the sky. The heavens from low down on the horizon nearly up to the zenith were covered with a red glare as though from an extensive conflagration. Telegrams from different points tell of the same phenomenon. This spectacle has been witnessed on every clear evening for sevaral days past and generally at between quarter after 5 and 6 o'clock.

MINERAL WEALTH OF MANITOBA. DISCOVERIES OF GOLD AND SILVER SAID TO HAVE BEEN MADE.

[BY TELEGRAPH TO THE TRIBUNE.]

Winnipeg, Nov. 27.—A glowing account of newly discovered mineral wealth in the Rocky Mountains comes from the terminus of the Canadian Pacific Railway Persons just returned from those regions declare that the mountains in the vicinity of the Bow and Ricking Horse rivers, as well as many smaller streams, contain both gold and silver. Scores of men have spent their time in prospecting, and the numerous rich finds show how their exertions have been rewarded. Leads have been discovered and claims staked out in every direction. Castle Mountain is said to be an almost solid mass of silver ore. Among other places where promising leads have been found are Johnsons and Bakers creeks, while some which are considered the best yet discovered are situated in the Kicking Horse Pass, and are owned by the Tunnel Moun-Ricking Horse Pass, and are owned by the Tunnel Moun-tain Mining Company. This company owns several claims carrying both gold and silver. Samples of the ore have been sent to Montreal for assay, and the returns show them to be very rich. The company will open an office at Bow River Forks, and in-tend to begin operations as soon as the weather will per-mit in the spring. The gold ore is chiefly free milling, and they say they have enough of it to make all the Northwest rich.
